"I am truly passionate about helping people get organized" said Sullivan, a certified professional organizer, "which is why I created GetOrganizedTulsa.com and am challenging Tulsans to make 2010 the year they really get organized."

GetOrganizedTulsa.com is available to anyone and includes quizzes to determine organizational status, weekly updates with information and organizational tips to incorporate into daily lives. Visitors can also comment on the tips and share their own experience or ask the organizer.

Ask the organizer is a great place to ask questions and receive an answer from a professional. The responses appear in blog form for the benefit of all visitors.

"Being organized means different things to different people but the bottom line is being organized does improve a person's quality of life. My hope is this site will help Tulsans make some life changes with regard to being organized."

A recent NAPO survey found that 96 percent of respondents felt they could save some time each day if they were more organized at home and 91 percent felt they could be more efficient at work if they were better organized. Overall, 71 percent indicated their quality of life would improve with more organization.

Sullivan started organizing in the Tulsa area in 2005 and owns Personally Organized, a business dedicated to creating individual organizing solutions for small business and residential clients.
